Hi Noosa,

I have read this book, and I have to say that this was the first book written by a Coptic author that really touched my heart. When I read it, I actually had tears in my eyes and was truly enthralled by it. I loved the poetry of it, the imagery and the messages of love.

I often feel that as an English speaker I miss out on the personality of the Pope as it is described to me by Arabic speakers/readers. He has a reputation of being very educated, quick witted and of inserting clever jokes into his lectures- I was very happy to find hints of that personality throughout this work, and it was lovely to finally be able to share in that!

I also don't speak arabic fluently. I am actually an American who was baptized as an adult 3 years ago. Anyhow, I have had to have people translate for me because I want to know what is being said. Being that this is going on, I made the decision to learn Arabic. I bought language tape to teach myself. It is very hard to learn but I pick up fast. Sometimes , some of the messages from church are only in Arabic and not translated. But when sometimes, the messages is translated to English, I start to take it to heart. For example, this past Good Friday, I heard a message that literly made me cry. I was just very emotional. I have read some English books that also made me cry.
